Lab announces reorganization, positions

by Vicki Stein, AFRL Headquarters

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AFB, OHIO — Air Force Research Laboratory officials announced recently a reorganization of the Wright Research Site in order to create a more efficient structure.

They are in the process of setting up 73 new positions. The positions will be considered for potential placement through Reduction in Force (RIF). The personnel affected are those in the Wright-Patterson Title V competitive area., and do not include any Laboratory Demonstration Project employees.

Wright Research Site director, Chris Remillard said, "AFRL employees who have been identified as surplus may be placed through the RIF process onto these positions. However, other Wright-Patterson AFB employees could be placed onto these positions as well."

Officials said that RIF notifications are scheduled to be issued on May 19th and any placements made would take effect October 2nd. @
